Police pushed to the limit

► Alberta's force strength, measured by officers per capita, is second-lowest behind the country's smallest province
► Officers per capita a symptom of funding need and image decline, Edmonton Police Association president says

SHELLEY WILLIAMSON

The city's staggering homicide numbers may not be cause for fear for the average citizen, but the ratio of police officers to people should, say those who study and represent cops.

With detectives still on the scene of the city's 25th homicide, the Edmonton Police Service's acting Chief David Korol addressed murder rates last week, downplaying risk for most citizens.

"If you are an Edmontonian who goes about your everyday business in a normal fashion, you are very safe," he said, dubbing most current cases "known-unknown."

While Sgt. Tony Simioni, president of the Edmonton Police Association, agrees most of the year's murders have drug, alcohol and "lifestyle" links, lack of staffing should sound alarms.

"We are the second-lowest (police to people) behind P.E.I.," said Simioni of the Alberta police rate.

He links Edmonton's lack of officers to a trend in cops retiring and challenges in attracting new city recruits.

"It's not as attractive a career as it used to be," he said, citing work-life balance issues and scrutiny of police in the media. "We have barely kept pace with filling positions."

But a "real inequity in federal funding" for police bucks for cities is also at fault, he said.

"Citizens have to ask the ques-

Stats Canada numbers

- As of May 15, 2010, Canada had 69,300 police officers, up by nearly 2,000 from 2009.
- Alberta had the second-lowest cops-per-capita at 177, with Edmonton at 166.

tion, 'Why are we not policing the city even to the median of the country?'" said Simioni.

Bill Pitt, Grant MacEwan University criminologist, calls the low ratio a Canadian trend.

Pitt estimates over the past nine years Edmonton has seen 100 more homicides than Calgary, a fact he says stems from its increasingly violent landscape.

Cause of plane crash still unclear

The Transportation Safety Board continues to investigate after two people were killed in a small plane crash in central Alberta.

Spokesman John Cottle says the four-seater Mooney M-20 was on its way from Vernon, B.C., to Killam, Alta., when it was reported missing late Friday night. RCMP say it took four hours of searching Saturday morning near Bashaw to find the wreckage in a farmer's field. The victims have been identified by family as Dean and Lee Sorken, brothers who were on their way to a family wedding.

Family of slain man seeks nearly $1 million

The family of a man allegedly killed by two 14-year-olds who had fled a Strathcona County youth centre is suing the facility and the government for nearly $1 million.

Barry Boenke and Sue Trudel were found dead on a property near Ardrossan in June 2009. A statement of claim names the minister of children and youth services, Bosco Homes, its employees and the teens as defendants, and alleges the boys, who go to trial in September, were not adequately supervised. Bosco Homes said in 2009 it would close the facility.

Community challenge energizes neighbourhoods

► Competition promotes unity and team spirit ► $10,000 worth of winnings put toward community upgrades

CHRIS SAVAGE
EDMONTON@METRONews.ca

Proud representatives of communities across the city were out in full force yesterday to represent their neighbourhoods in the final stages of the second annual Community Challenge.

Friendly competition between 22 teams went on all weekend, and the wrap-up took place at the Glenora Community League Hall.

Cheques were handed out to the first-, second- and third-place winners for $5,000, $3,000 and $2,000, with the funds to be used by each community league for a project that directly benefits the local neighbourhood.

The community of Southwood took home the win, with Rosslyn and Prince Rupert following in second and third places.

"Our hall is going to get some much-needed upgrades," said Maureen Bafford, member of the winning Southwood team. "We loved getting everyone together."

The competitions themselves had charitable components worked in, with teams earning points toward their overall score. One team donated 90 bus tickets to iHuman, an Edmonton inner-city youth society that featured some of its musical talent at the closing ceremonies. In addition, more than 350 pounds of food donations were collected throughout the event.

"It's phenomenal," said Catherine Broomfield, iHuman executive director. "We really appreciate the opportunity to give our youth a chance to perform."

Five events made up the challenges for the competitors including a photo challenge, a scavenger hunt and a mystery challenge on the final

Video stores battles through tough times

SHELLEY WILLIAMSON/METRO

- ▶ Smaller video rental shops finding new ways to compete
- ▶ Larger chain retailers such as Blockbuster closing numerous locations

CHRIS SAVAGE
EDMONTON@METRONEWS.CA

Privately owned video stores are doing the best they can to stay afloat while large retail chains appear to be gone with the wind.

Last month, the Canadian division of Blockbuster Video announced it would be closing 146 locations across Canada, including six in Edmonton, due to growing debt and lack of revenue. Downloading, pay-per-view movies and streaming have been the main reasons for the downfall of the rental giant.

Yet some privately owned video stores, such as the The Videodrome near Whyte Avenue, are finding ways to adapt in tough times.

The business has a website with links to Twitter and Facebook, and they also shelve a wider selection of hard-to-find movies, such as independent and foreign films, to garner repeat customers.

"Our staff really knows about movies," said manager Heather Noel. "Although we carry new releases, our selection of older movies is so much better."

Time will tell if the smaller, more specialized stores will be able to pull through, but they have something on their side, said Noel.

"I think people want to live in a city with cool, local, independent businesses," she said.

Israeli troops yesterday battled hundreds of pro-Palestinian protesters who tried to burst across Syria's frontier with the Golan Heights, killing a reported 20 people and wounding scores more in the second outbreak of deadly violence in the border area in less than a month.

The clashes, marking the anniversary of the Arab defeat in the 1967 Mideast war, drew Israeli accusations that Syria was orchestrating the violence to shift attention away from a bloody crackdown on opposition protests at home. The marchers, who had organized on Facebook, passed by Syrian and UN outposts on their way to the front lines.

"The Syrian government is trying to create a provocation," said Israel's chief military spokesman, Brig. Gen. Yoav Mordechai. "This border has been quiet for decades, but only now with all the unrest in Syrian towns is there an attempt to draw attention to the border."

Yemenis dance as president gets surgery

Protesters danced, sang and slaughtered cows in the central square of Yemen's capital yesterday to celebrate the departure of the country's authoritarian leader for medical treatment in Saudi Arabia after he was wounded in a rocket attack on his compound.

President Ali Abdullah Saleh, who was taken to a military hospital in the Saudi capital, Riyadh, underwent successful surgery on his chest to remove jagged pieces of wood that splintered from a mosque pulpit when his compound was hit by rockets on Friday, said medical officials and a Yemeni diplomat. They spoke on condition of anonymity because they did not have permission to release the information.

Novel drugs offer skin cancer patients new hope

► Two studies find extended survival for those with deadly melanoma

They're not cures, but two novel drugs produced unprecedented gains in survival in separate studies of people with melanoma, the deadliest form of skin cancer, doctors reported yesterday.

In one study, an experimental drug showed so much benefit so quickly in people with advanced disease that those getting a comparison drug were allowed to switch after just a few months.

The drug, vemurafenib, targets a gene mutation found in about half of all melanomas. The drug is being developed by Genentech, part of Swiss-based Roche, and Plexxikon Inc., part of the Daiichi Sankyo Group of Japan.

The second study tested Bristol-Myers Squibb Co.'s Yervoy, a just-approved medicine for newly diagnosed melanoma patients, and found it nearly doubled the number who survived at least three years.

"Melanoma has just seen a renaissance of new agents," and more are being tested, said Dr. Allen Lichter, chief executive of the American Society of Clinical Oncology. The studies were published online by the New England Journal of Medicine.

E. coli outbreak linked to Germany

The E. coli outbreak in Europe appears to have been caused by vegetable sprouts grown in Germany, an agriculture official said yesterday as the toll climbed to at least 22 dead and more than 2,200 sickened.

Preliminary tests found that bean sprouts and other

'Obedient Wives' attract criticism in Malaysia

► New club says good sex a must for happy marriage ► Founders previously set up a Polygamy Club

Some 800 Muslim women in Malaysia are members of the "Obedient Wives Club" that is generating controversy in one of the most modern and progressive Muslim-majority countries, where many women hold high posts in the government and corporate world.

The new club, launched Saturday, says it can cure social ills such as prostitution and divorce by teaching women to be submissive and keep their men happy in the bedroom.

The club, founded by a fringe Islamic group known as Global Ikhwan, has been dismissed by politicians

Concerns

- Groups such as Global Ikhwan are unlikely to gain much popularity beyond generating shock value.
- Still, there is concern that radical groups could garner support among other Muslims, who make up 60 per cent of the 28-million population, and upset decades of carefully nurtured racial and religious harmony.

Flaherty set to revisit budget

In a way, it will go down as the ultimate budget leak.

When Finance Minister Jim Flaherty stands up in the House of Commons today to deliver the government's fiscal plan for the upcoming year, Canadians could be forgiven for thinking they've heard it before.

They have. As Flaherty has repeatedly said since his party won its first majority on May 2, he intends to bring back essentially the same document he unveiled two months ago and that all three opposition parties rejected.

Taking what remains of the drama out of the process, Flaherty has also unveiled the two major changes he does intend to bring in — setting aside about $2.2 billion for Quebec's adoption of the harmonized sales tax, and beginning the process of phasing out political party financing.

"Basically this is the March 22 budget with a couple of additions from the platform," the minister said recently. Officials have also let it be known there will be few surprises, if any, reducing the usual all-day lock-up for reporters to a slim two hours.

SOLUTIONS AREN'T ALWAYS EASY TO UNCOVER

URBAN COMPASS

TERENCE HARDING
METRO EDMONTON

Many of Edmonton's initiatives hope to put us on some real or imagined map. I'm sure that leading the nation in homicides isn't what it had in mind.

As of March 6, we had 13 homicides. By April, we had 17. Last year at that time, we had four. This month we have managed to push the number of homicides to a startling 25.

However, it's important to note that these are homicides, not necessarily murders. Included in that number are two that were the result of confrontations with police. Of the remaining 23, one was a death at the Edmonton Max and the other was at the Remand Centre.

"What we need to do is determine what the underlying reason for all these homicides are and work at eliminating them. I could take a guess at what we would find out — homelessness, poverty, domestic abuse, drug addiction ..."

That still leaves us with 21 homicides that probably make us a little twitchy when we find ourselves in unfamiliar city territory, or when we are confronted by someone on the street asking for change or a cigarette.

The mayor's response to the latest death was to opine that perhaps we should beef up our police presence. That response is not surprising, but I doubt it would reduce the number of homicides. It might lead to quicker arrests and convictions, but not much more than that.

What we need to do is determine what the underlying reason for all these homicides are and work at eliminating them. I could take a guess at what we would find out — homelessness, poverty, domestic abuse, drug addiction or childhood abuse. But, at best, that would be just a guess.

One thing that I have learned over the years is that if we misdiagnose a problem, we will never come up with the right solution.

The concern about running the LRT as a surface route in Chinatown surprises me. I would have thought that community consultation was meant to prevent or resolve that sort of issue, but apparently not. The city's position is that putting the line underground is far too expensive.

I think this is just one more example of the city's flawed short-term thinking.

As the city grows, surface-level LRT will be a growing problem. If you want to know what it will lead to, take a drive past the Cross Cancer Institute. While waiting 10 to 15 minutes to get across 111 Street, you might want to ask yourself if a surface route there was a particularly good idea. No city has ever regretted putting its rapid transit system underground.

Who's afraid of the big bad wolf?

- 19-year-old Tyler Posey gets some big claws and fangs for his role in Teen Wolf
- TV show has little in common with the original Michael J. Fox film from the 1980s

There's just something about Tyler Posey that makes people think of werewolves. Not only is he leading MTV's new, darker series version of Teen Wolf, but 19-year-old California native was also considered for the role of shape-changing Jacob Black in the Twilight films — a role that eventually went to Taylor Lautner.

"I guess, according to MTV, I have a lupine look, which I had no idea what that meant. Does anyone know what that means?" Posey asks, before being given the definition. "Wolf-like? I had no idea what that meant. But yeah, I have a 'lupine' look." Which is not to say Posey is a particularly hirsute young man. "I shaved 18 days ago," he jokes. "I grow no hair. I just look like a wolf. Dark and handsome."

In fact, if he could take on any of his werewolf alter-ego's abilities, it wouldn't be the increased speed, strength or senses, he admits. "I'd like to grow hair. On my face," he says. "My

Posey is quick to point out this Teen Wolf doesn't have a lot in common with the original film — which came out before Posey and most of its target audience were born — including how his character looks

"The big movie I really looked at for inspiration was Wolf with Jack Nicholson, because it's totally our genre," he says. "It's funny, there's romance in it, and his wolf looks a lot more like ours. It's more smooth and ... was it sexy? I don't want to call Jack Nicholson sexy. But he is."

While other actors might be canceling their Internet service to avoid reading scathing message board rants — which Teen Wolf was generating long before its premiere — Posey refuses to hide.

"I like hearing reviews, I like hearing what people have to say," he says. "I want to keep track of the show, see what people think. Nothing deters me. If people say bad reviews, it's just like, I like the show. That's what matters, right?"

Besides, Posey knows he has supporters, since he in-

"Having those big experiences just makes me like recess back further into the hole that I'm in that makes me want to get better."

Yet that last comment does not mean that Green, with an ever-growing contingent of fans waiting on his music, is shying away from personal material.

In fact, on Green's third solo disc, Little Hell — out Tuesday — the 30-year-old includes enough critically intimate details of his life to

He delves into his wife's nightmares, into the way he relates to his parents, into fleeting moments of relationship-related despair and into the mental-health struggles endured by his sister.

He says writing about his innermost feelings is not new for him, but he continues to strive for universality even in his most personal pieces.

"When I write songs like that ... I guess I think I write them in a relatable enough way that anyone who's been through something with someone they love, you can easily listen to that song and just replace the word 'sister' with brother, mother, father, or uncle, aunt, anything."

Illness forces Adele to cancel tour dates

British singer Adele has cancelled the remaining dates on her North American tour because of her laryngitis.

In a statement Friday, Adele said she was "really frustrated" but "there is absolutely nothing I can do but take the doctor's advice and rest some more."

The announcement came days after the singer postponed five dates on the tour. She is now cancelling the nine remaining shows.

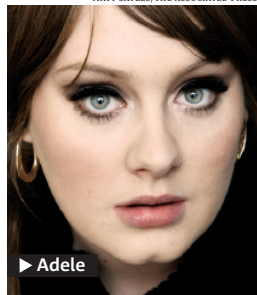

The 23-year-old's sophomore album, 21, is the bestselling album of the year. It has sold close to two million units in America.

Her single, Rolling In the Deep, is currently No. 1 on Billboard's Hot 100 charts.

The statement also said that rescheduling the tour dates was "being investigated."

Platinum plus?

- ▶ Each of Green's previous two independently released solo projects (2005's Sometimes and 2008's Bring Me Your Love) were certified platinum in Canada.
- ▶ Some have already made the not-so-bold prediction that Green could build on those returns with his third effort, which is set for release on Tuesday.
- ▶ London's Independent newspaper, for instance, mused in its recent four-star review of his live performance that Little Hell was "likely to provide his true coming-of-age."

- ▶ But Green says he doesn't take such praise to heart. "You get to the point where you start believing the hype and you lose that buffer zone where you can tell if something that you wrote is (bad) or not," he said. "Because if everyone likes it, then you think, Oh geez, I can do no wrong."

Arcade film not intended as political statement: Band

PATRICK SEMANSKY/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Arcade Fire has long held a reputation for seriousness, whether it's the Montreal band's carefully contemplated music, their politics or their unwaveringly independent ethos.

So it's perhaps not surprising that the stark images in the band's new Spike Jonze-directed short film Scenes from the Suburbs — in which shadowy military characters at one point execute a civilian on a pristine suburban street — are being interpreted as a statement on the military, or U.S. border security, or the suburbs themselves.

But really, the band's Will Butler says they were just having fun making a short film influenced by the sci-fi adventure movies they grew up watching.

"No, I think it starts with the genre, like: 'Let's make a dystopian movie,'" Butler corrected.

"It wasn't like: 'The world is going to hell, and this is the hell we'll be in in 25 years.' It was more like, let's make a sci-fi movie. Oh, what's a plausible path that this could take?"

"But really, we want some guys with guns in the future."

▶ Members of Arcade Fire perform at the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival in May.

Indeed, Scenes from the Suburbs — which is screening at the CFC Worldwide Short Films Festival this week in Toronto and will then be included as part of a deluxe version of the Montreal band's third album The Suburbs on August 2 — is a sci-fi puzzler that seems to blend the paranoia of Terry Gilliam films with the nostalgia of classic Steven Spielberg flicks.

The nearly 30-minute film fills in some of the gaps in the shorter version of the music video for The Suburbs. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ciao, Cameron: Rodriguez back to his first love

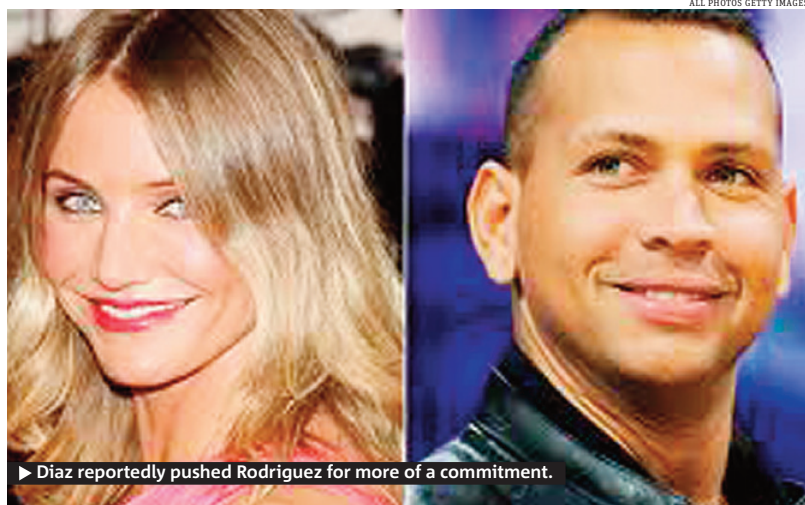

► Alex Rodriguez dumps Cameron Diaz ► Says he 'needs to focus on baseball' ► Source says Diaz went overboard trying to please him

Cameron Diaz and Alex Rodriguez have called it quits, according to Perez Hilton, and Diaz is reportedly none too thrilled about it.

"They've broken up," a source says. "[Cameron is] hurt and betrayed, because she tried so hard to please him. She went overboard."

And according to Page Six, Rodriguez was the one who instigated the split, telling Diaz "that he needs to focus on baseball and that's all there is to it," according to a source.

"He thought she would be an easy girlfriend. But then she pushed for more of a commitment, and he told her to cool it."

Sean Penn and Scarlett Johansson have reportedly broken up after only a few months of dating, according to People magazine.

There was no reason given for the split, as reps for both stars refused to comment.

Battle Hymn of the Tiger Mother author Amy Chua admits regrets — but not about writing memoir.

► "Education in online spaces is absolutely crucial for younger people," says Zack Whittaker, a criminologist and blogger for iGeneration.

Kids on Facebook?

► Mark Zuckerberg recently said, if he could, he'd open up the site to children under 13 ► Zack Whittaker, a criminologist and blogger for iGeneration, weighs in on the controversy

You wrote that you're against children on Facebook. Why is that site different from MySpace or MSN messenger, where kids can befriend random screen names?

Well, as Facebook draws in over 500 million users worldwide, it is natural for the site to attract the most attention. While other sites should not bask in the heat Facebook feels with pressure from privacy advocacy groups, there is no difference between a seemingly random screen name on MSN/Windows Live and using a fake name on Facebook. Identity goes further than simply the name we use or details we hand over.

As a criminologist, what do you feel is the most effective way to stop predators? Or to catch them?

This insidious relationship we have with online predatory behaviour is ubiquitous across sites involving children. Online sex offenders should be restricted from using social networks, but this simply prevents online reoffending. The balance should be maintained between children's access to offenders as well as offenders' access to children. A bipartite arrangement should be enforced, with children of a certain age — say 13 and upwards, as Facebook has as its current policy — are allowed on social networking sites, but with a restricted panel of privacy settings to prevent automatic disclosure of a child's information.

But how do we institute laws without violating privacy? It is an immensely difficult balance to strike. Unfortunately, it is only for criminologists and sociologists to debate, and for respective parliaments, assemblies, congresses and legislators alike to implement. Privacy should be the foremost point for the minds of those constructing laws. If freedom of expression and speech can align with privacy — something the United States holds better than its British cousins — then we are at least one step in the right direction.

Should there be stricter guidelines for opening up a social media account?

Yes, in that it would prevent spam accounts from being created — formed from fake names that water down the concentrated social experience for the rest of users. Equally no, in that the less information there is about users online, the less chance that social media companies can misuse private user information, as Facebook has shown to do before.

► From using efficient appliances to building rooftop gardens, there are simple ways to live a green life

BEN KNIGHT
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

A home is the largest — and often oldest — possession many Canadians own. The world is changing rapidly, and even a house as young as 50 years old was built in a time where building methods and future priorities were very different than they are now.

As a result, home renovation is booming across the country. And — like any other growth industries — green, eco-friendly projects are more popular than ever.

"There's always an energy-efficiency step you can take," says Steven Price, senior director for conservation, science and practice with WWF-Canada. "The best thing to do is get an energy audit. They're not very expensive, and if you want to target your money for best value, an energy audit will help you figure out the best place to go."

Price recently renovated his 100-year-old semi-detached home. He says the Internet is filled with useful information, big-box retailers offer lots of green advice, and the money you invest will absolutely hold its value.

"In most cases, if you have the capital to invest in home insulation or more efficient appliances, beautiful bar

it will pay back in the long run. On energy, that will be increasingly true as prices go up in the future. It's harder to justify the gray-water tanks and the cisterns from a price point alone. But they will become more and more affordable with time — as water becomes the new oil, in terms of its preciousness."

Price also saved money by recycling old ceiling beams and discarded bricks into a

Another inspired idea is greening your roof — literally. "We made a garden on a flat roof — about the size of an apartment balcony. We're able to grow mint and spices, and have a sitting chair. That's pretty nice."

UNCORKING TRUTHS BEHIND ORGANIC WINE

What's the difference between organic wine and conventional wine? Peter of Vancouver

QUEEN OF GREEN

LINDSAY COULTER
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

Wineries that produce certified organic wine cannot use toxic pesticides, herbicides or synthetic fertilizers to grow grapes. An organic vineyard will fertilize crops with compost, compost teas, green manure and cover crops. Instead of herbicides, they rely on mechanical weeding, mowing around the vines, mulching and companion planting. To avoid the use of insecticides to control cutworms, organic practices include grazing chickens under the vines or picking cutworms off the leaves one by one.

Certified organic wine doesn't use any genetically modified organisms (GMOs) either. GMO yeast, for example, is allowed in conventional wines. And when it comes to other additives, certified organic wines don't contain sulphites. However, wine labelled "Made with organically grown grapes" may have sulphur dioxide. The latter might also be processed using the same equipment and in the same facility as conventional wine.

So among organic wines, bottles with a third-party certified organic label would meet the highest standards. You also come across biodynamic wines. Biodynamic farming techniques use a vineyard's natural resources to cultivate grapes without pesticides, fungicides, herbicides, synthetic fertilizers or growth stimulants. A certified biodynamic vineyard often meets or exceeds the standards and regulations for organic-certified farming.

Some wineries also take land stewardship and living in harmony with wildlife seriously. They educate workers, asking them not to kill native snake species, which are often rare or endangered. They might install snake barrier fencing and incorporate worker safety training.

Others restore native habitats through planting native shrubs, wildflowers and grasses or account for losing some of their harvest to local wildlife like bears.

Giving unto others while globe-trotting

► Voluntourism can be great for the resumé, and even better for the weary worker's soul

DREW HINSHAW
LIFE@METRONWS.CA

There's no place like home, but when five unemployed folks jostle for every dismal opening, home may have no place for you — which is why job counselors suggest the quick trick to make your career take flight could be a stint volunteering on a faraway shore.

A trip spent archiving artifacts or replanting rainforests can help both the un- and un-happily employed rediscover their calling, says sabbatical coach Clive Prout.

"If you're unhappy with your current career, then use a sabbatical as a way to get out of it," he offers.

"If you leave the country, you get a sense of the things we take for granted, particularly what we use as measures of success."

Voluntourism, Doug Cutchins, author of Volunteer Vacations, says can also be a way to test-drive a new vocation, like eco-management or development economics.

But it doesn't have to just be a break from your career, he adds — it can be a break for your career.

"Volunteer vacations could be a short-term way to get some training, maybe learn another language, and pick up skills," he says. "Really smart employers will not care so much whether you've been paid, just whether you've shown dedication, creativity, and hard work."

PUT IT ON THE RESUMÉ

Details like time spent laboring in an exotic locale can make your resumé leap from the stack, Cutchins says — and hopefully not off the table.

The trick to leveraging a volunteer vacation into acceptable resumé material, he says is to "just focus on the skills that you gained or honed."

"It's easier to make your resumé stand out if you've taken time off to do things that you believe are going to make a difference," Prout concurs.

Then, when the interview hour arrives, "Talk about how those particular experiences are relative to the job," Cutchins adds.

► Start out with a spot you've been aching to see, then check if there's a way you can help out in the area.

The Money Question

It may seem odd but volunteering costs money, more often than not:

But it need not cost a lot, Cutchins claims.

"Staying domestically certainly costs a lot less than going internationally," he says. Staying for a while, he adds, reduces it further.

And others are willing to waive it outright.

"There's not an insignificant list of organizations that are free or nearly free," Cutchins says.

Canucks halfway to prize, but toughest part remains

► Series heads to Boston, where Bruins are 7-3 in 2011 playoffs

The Vancouver Canucks didn't embark on this particular business trip with celebrating on their minds.

Halfway home to the Stanley Cup, the team landed in Boston with the opportunity to claim its first championship before getting on another plane. The mere prospect of that had people celebrating on the streets of Vancouver long into yesterday morning, but the enthusiasm didn't rub off on the players who will be charged with getting the job done.

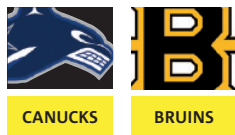

"It's been tight, really close games," forward Henrik Sedin said last night. "Both could have gone either way. We know that we have to play better."

"They're a good team and we've got a lot of respect for those guys."

With Game 3 looming at what promises to be an amped-up TD Garden tonight, the Canucks are expecting to see a different Bruins team from the one they beat twice at Rogers Arena.

An old adage suggests a playoff series isn't over until a team has lost on home ice. The Vancouver players are willing to take it even further after watching Chicago erase a 3-0 deficit in the first round and force overtime in Game 7.

"If there's anything this playoffs have taught, it's that you can't (get ahead of yourself)," said forward Janik Hansen. "You've seen how many series have been up and you think, 'Oh now the team is going to close it out,' and suddenly the other team has been back. We've had that experience ourselves."

The Canucks are coming across as extremely poised in the midst of an emotional time. They're riding a wave of positivity after scoring a Game 1 victory on a goal by Raffi Torres with 18.5 seconds to play before pulling Game 2 out just 11 seconds into overtime on an Alex Burrows wraparound.

It's put a long-awaited championship just outside of their grasp.

"I think the players have to be focused on the task at hand," said Canucks coach Alain Vigneault. "If you are focused on the task and what you need to do to perform well, then your emotions are the right ones, your intensity is the right intensity and you can go out there and execute."

The series is starting to see some bad blood develop between the teams. Vigneault referred yesterday to a Rich Peverley slash on Kevin Bieksa as a "cheap shot" that "you don't want to see in the game."

Miami takes 2-1 finals lead

The Miami Heat didn't blow this one. Now they're two wins from being crowned NBA champions.

Chris Bosh made a 16-foot, go-ahead jumper from the baseline with 39.6 seconds left and the Heat held on for an 88-86 victory over the Dallas Mavericks last night for a 2-1 lead in the NBA final.

Miami got into this tight series by blowing a 15-point lead in the last quarter of Game 2. The Heat already had wasted a 14-point lead in this game when they went back ahead 81-75 with 6:31 left. They knew Dirk Nowitzki would drive Dallas's rally, but he burned them anyway for 12 straight points.

Udonis Haslem had only six points, but his tough defence on Nowitzki saved the Heat in the end.

Nowitzki finished with 34 points, but didn't get much help from his teammates.

LeBron James added 17 points and nine assists. But he also had four turnovers, including a pair during the fourth quarter that helped bring Dallas back. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Regardless of the setting or the surface, Rafael Nadal confounds Roger Federer the way no other man can.

Put the two greats of the game on opposite ends of a court in a Grand Slam final — particularly at Roland Garros, on the red clay that Nadal rules — and the one-sided nature of the rivalry grows even more pronounced.

Grinding along the baseline, using every inch of his wingspan to extend points, whipping fearsome forehands this way and that, Nadal flummoxed Federer yet again yesterday in a riveting highlight-filled match, beating him 7-5, 7-6 (3), 5-7, 6-1 for a record-tying sixth French Open championship and 10th major title overall.

"He plays better against the better ones, and that's what he showed today," said Federer, owner of 16 Grand Slam trophies. "He's a great champion, on clay, especially."

There's no question that Nadal is as good as it gets in Paris — 45-1 for his career, and the same number of titles there as Bjorn Borg — but the Spaniard already also has shown that he is much more than the King of Clay. RAFAEL NADAL called the Greatest of All Time if he is not even the Greatest of Right Now.

Nadal leads their head-to-head series 17-8. That includes a 6-2 advantage in Grand Slam finals and a 5-0 edge at the French Open (in the 2005 semifinals, and the 2006, 2007, 2008 and 2011 finals).

When a reporter recited those numbers and asked for an assessment, Nadal replied: "Well, it means I can play well, too."

"When you talk about these statistics, when you try and make these comparisons, really it's not very interesting to me," continued Nadal, who would have ceded the No. 1 ranking to Novak Djokovic with a loss yesterday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thrashers GM won't make the trip north

Rick Dudley won't be part of the NHL's return to Winnipeg.

True North Sports and Entertainment confirmed yesterday that it will not retain Dudley's services as general manager when the Atlanta Thrashers relocate to the Manitoba capital next season.

The company purchased the Thrashers this week and has already met its goal of selling 13,000 season tickets.

► Rick Dudley

Dudley, who was named the Thrashers' GM in April 2010, had four years remaining on his contract.

"After meeting with Rick Dudley this week, we have decided to go in another direction with the position of general manager of our team," True North chairman Mark Chipman said in a release. "We informed Rick of our decision late (Saturday) afternoon, and thanked him for his work in building a foundation and future for this team."

Craig Heisinger, the general manager of the American Hockey League's Manitoba Moose, is expected to be a key piece of the NHL club's front office. When sale of the team was announced, Chipman said Heisinger would play a "significant role."

Chicago Blackhawks assistant general manager Kevin Cheveldayoff has also been linked to the club.

True North did not say who will be in attendance on the team's behalf at the NHL's GM meetings in Boston on Wednesday.

Bruins sticking to their game plan

After making the long trip home yesterday, the Boston Bruins didn't walk off the plane with a long list of changes or adjustments planned.

Instead, their strategy for getting back into the Stanley Cup final against the Vancouver Canucks was to stick with what got them here. Facing a virtual must-win Game 3 tonight, the Bruins were looking to embrace the energy of playing on home ice — they're 7-3 at TD Garden during this post-season — while continuing to ride Zdeno Chara and Tim Thomas.

Those two men were both beaten by Alex Burrows before he brought a quick end to overtime in Game 2. Thomas was caught out of his goal as Burrows outraced Chara to score on a wraparound, but the Bruins goalie scoffed at the notion he might want to tone down his aggressive style.

"I have a pretty good idea of how to play goalie," Thomas said yesterday. "I'm not going to be taking suggestions or advice at this time. I'm just going to keep playing the way I have."

There was more than a hint of defiance from the Eastern Conference champions, who clearly feel unlucky to be trailing the series 2-0 after a pair of one-goal losses.

Coach Claude Julien came to the defence of both Thomas and Chara, the towering six-foot-nine defenceman who had a tough outing in Game 2. The Bruins captain is averaging more than 28 minutes per game in the playoffs and shouldn't expect to see that workload eased any.

"Where we are right now, we have to look at it this way: He's got all summer long to rest," said Julien. "Now is not the time to start giving him a rest. We're in a fight here for a Stanley Cup."

"He's capable of taking it."

Julien hinted at needing to make a few small "corrections" before the puck is dropped for Game 3. THE CANADIAN PRESS
